

BIG DROP BREWING CO.

Big Drop

At last! The craft brewing renaissance has collided happily with the soaring international trend for low alcohol beverages. Big Drop Brewing Co was created in 2016 by Rob Fink following his own healthy lifestyle epiphany. Having realised how poorly this section of the market was served, he teamed up with Johnny Clayton, renowned for his experimental brewing prowess, to found the first UK brewery dedicated exclusively to the production of low alcohol beer.

By creating a product at 0.5% ABV rather than completely alcohol free, Big Drop avoids going down the extractive route followed by its competitors of heating and reverse osmosis, which invariably have a detrimental effect on quality. Instead the team works with specially selected malts and “lazy” yeast to ferment a range of beer with negligible alcohol content but maximum flavour, depth and satisfaction.

The first release was a stout, followed in 2017 after intensive testing by a pale ale, lager and spiced ale. The awards and listings haven't stopped pouring in ever since. From major supermarket groups and monopolies to luxury outlets such as Fortnum & Mason and Michelin-starred restaurant Hakkasan, Big Drop is busy quenching the thirst of beer fans who want great taste and presentation without compromise on flavour.
