

PINKSTER
AGREEABLY BRITISH GIN

Pinkster

Pinkster's 'Agreeably British Gin' is a quirky, uniquely high quality flavoured gin made in Cambridgeshire, which has developed a fantastic following since its launch in 2013.

Founder Stephen Marsh started producing the gin for his own consumption after developing a yeast allergy. Having served it to guests, he was persuaded to produce Pinkster commercially.

The Pinkster process involves hand-steeping fresh raspberries – all farmed in the English counties of Kent and Cambridgeshire – in the brand's triple-distilled spirit. The result is deliciously dry, with the hint of raspberry and the smoothest of flavours.

A silver-medalist at the IWSC 2014, Pinkster can be served with ice, tonic or in cocktails as a perfect summer alternative.

The strengthening interest in premium flavoured gin has already ensured a dynamic export market for Pinkster

Alcohol: 37.5% ABV

Format: 70cl bottle

Tasting note: A grapefruit burst up front on the nose with plenty of other citrus notes following on behind. Next comes a sprinkling of lemon zest on thick rich cheesecake, then juniper mixed with a couple of whole fennel seeds and green apple skins. The finish is initially much sweeter, with lemon sherbet and raspberry refresher sweeties before a sharp juniper finish.
